Humanities Washington
Strategic Plan 2023-2027
Letter from Julie & Eric

Dear Friends and Partners,

Like so much in the last few years, the planning process for our 2023-27 Strategic Plan was unique and unusual. Pandemic recovery, profound and growing recognition of unfinished work to build equitable communities, and rapidly changing community needs caused us to dig deep and think creatively as to how the humanities can help drive positive community change.

We are grateful to each of the 300 partners and stakeholders who took the time to tell us what we do well, what we could do better, and what new avenues we should explore. After listening and deeply considering community feedback, a dedicated strategic planning committee engaged in deep discussion and ambitious visioning. This plan synthesizes these great ideas. Many thanks to Shandy Abrahamson (Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction), Andrew Chanse (Spokane Library), Betsy Godlewski (Northwest Museum of Art and Culture), David Powers (Seattle University), and Joshua Heim (Western Arts Alliance) for their work on this plan. We also thank our partners at Future Work Design for facilitating this process.

Our 2023-27 Strategic Plan builds upon the successes of the last five years and focuses on growing the opportunity explore our human (i) ties. We seek to lead a statewide movement to broaden participation in the humanities, promote the exploration of ideas across perspectives, and keep the foundation of our organization strong. In support of these objectives, we will innovate within our existing programs and introduce several new initiatives. We hope you will join us as an active participant in this journey!

With great appreciation,

Julie Ziegler

How we arrived at this strategy

This strategic plan was developed in 2022 as a collaboration between our Board of Trustees and staff, facilitated by Future Work Design. We grounded our work in four months of community and stakeholder consultation, including:

- 26 Current Humanities Washington partner organizations
- 245 Community members from across the state
- 10 Each of Washington’s 10 Congressional Districts represented

The Strategic Plan was drafted in summer/fall 2022 and approved by the Humanities Washington Board of Trustees in February 2023.

This listening effort produced a Listening Report in spring 2022. Key findings of this report were:

- Stakeholders overwhelmingly support our current mission, vision, and strategic pillars.
- Community stakeholders expressed that HW is on the right track.
- Need to articulate clear values so our communities know what we stand for.
- Stakeholders want HW to drive outcomes in many areas: reduced political polarization, diverse representation among program voices, increased diversity of participants and partners, relevance of topics, awareness of humanities, focus on rural communities, focus on youth and teens, virtual/hybrid participation, strengthening HW’s organizational and financial health.
- HW’s role in supporting civic engagement, democracy, and community was a particularly strong theme of feedback.

Throughout this document you will see the symbol to emphasize goals and strategies focused on equity. As we developed these strategies, Equity and Anti-Racism were central to the dialogue about where Humanities Washington should focus efforts in the future. You will see this focus woven throughout our strategies.
Community Feedback

“There has been increased antagonism and division among people over the past few years as well as the trend for people seeming to feel more comfortable in outwardly, publicly committing aggressions. There needs to be more support for creating cultural understanding, empathy and acceptance.”

Jane López-Santillana, Snohomish County

“As a public librarian, my biggest concern is how to provide relevant programs that bridge the issues of racial/social justice, generational gaps, and economic inequality. I would love to have the opportunity to provide programming that transcends generational gaps and creates opportunities for everyone to learn from each other about important issues.”

Carlee Osburn, Pierce County

“I’d like to see a public shift about the value of the humanities-- this could be more people wanting to study it, attend events, more celebrated poets and artists, too much money donated that it becomes challenging to manage.”

Sergia Hay, Tacoma

“(Humanities Washington makes) an effort to be inclusive, not exclusive.”

- Resource all priorities with adequate staff
- Create regular opportunities for ongoing education and reflection for equity and inclusion.

Ensure ongoing strength of Board of Trustees

- Continue training in EDI principles and integration into board operations
- Continue skill building in finance, fundraising, and advocacy/government relations
- Increase board connectivity to national humanities community
- Grow intra- and inter-community connectivity of trustees
Core Values

These values guide everything we do, from the experience we try to create through each HW program, event, or publication—to the way we treat each other as staff, board and partners. As we strive to steward an important public mission, we invite our communities and stakeholders to hold us accountable to upholding these values.

We uphold public trust through impactful and transparent use of resources.

We encourage personal reflection, open-mindedness, lifelong learning, and truth-seeking.

We believe people are equal in dignity and strive to provide welcoming spaces that uphold the dignity of our participants and promote the productive exchange of ideas.

We want people of all ages, means, cultures to feel welcome and valued in our organization and programs.

We seek opportunities to promote healthy dialogue between people with differing perspectives in order to build and strengthen mutually beneficial community relationships.
How we measure impact

How broad is participation in the humanities?
1. # individuals served by/through HW, disaggregated by age, race/ethnicity, and geography
2. # programs with partners, disaggregated by geography
3. # and types of organizational partners, including BIPOC-led and –serving
4. $ obtained for HW and sector from state and federal sources
5. # of collaborative partnerships with other state-focused organizations

Are people engaging beyond their immediate circle?
1. #/$ grant funding, disaggregated by age, race/ethnicity, and geography of grantee beneficiaries
2. Track breadth/diversity of topics and voices presented
3. # of new program formats
4. Growth in social media and other digital engagement
5. Program evaluations indicate:
   - Participants feel more confident in their ability to engage across difference
   - HW programs respond to a range of community interests
   - HW programs highlight/are respectful of a range of lived experiences

Does HW have the people and financial resources to support its mission?
1. Financial reserves at 4-6 months operating expenses
2. Growth in individual giving, disaggregated by age, race/ethnicity, and geography
3. General public is more familiar with HW and its programs
4. Organizational Health survey/score
5. Diversity of board, staff and scholars
